Fire ravages city: Westm

Kirkland firefighters suffer from smoke inhalation.

Day Six: Record blaze levels the entire city

by Nerwin Blockhead
very special to the Daily Snooze

The most severe fire to strike Montreal in 467 years has taken its toll on the city, gutting every building downtown, levelling the east, west, north and south ends and leaving millions homeless.

Westmount, however, miraculously eluded the path of the violent blaze which continues to rage everywhere.

Yesterday, insurance officials at Good Gouge Canada estimated damage costs from the fire will run into the zillions. Today, however, they are not answering their phones.

Fire department officials reported this morning that former Alignment Quebec president, Royale Bore, was seen laughing hysterically on Crescent street.

Lieutenant Yves Plammondon of station 10 turned his hose on Bore to calm him down as he watched the AQ headquarters sizzle for the second time in two months.

"He looked realy pathetic," said Plammondon. "So I just opened the hose and let it rip. He snapped out of it."

Many Montrealers have sought refuge in the Westmount library. Library officials say as many as 56,000 refugees from St. Henri and neighboring municipalities managed to stuff themselves into the reference area on day 3 of the blaze.

Outremont businesswoman, Tammy Moore, said sleeping in a library with more than 95,000 other people was scary.

"It was scary," said Moore, who hasn't washed in five days, "all those unshaven men are gross. And the people from the reference area telling us to pipe down has driven me bonkers."

But Clyde Nipster of St. Henri said the fire has brought Montrealers toghether.

Nipster, who is beginning to smell like used toilet paper, said he made a lot of friends since the fire's outbreak in Kirkland last week.

"I made lots of friends," said an articulate Nipster.

Statistics compiled after day six of the blaze reveal that everything except Westmount and the Daily Snooze office is destroyed.

Place Ville Marie is gone.

The Olympic Stadium has melted to an irreperable state.

The St. Catherine Street landmark, Eatins, is kaput. However, one of Eatins chubby dammed English clerks reportedly survived the blaze.

The Snooze has learned she is staying in the microfilm room of the Westmount library along with 22,000 other refugees.

MUC police report looting in the downtown area is minimal since nothing much remains there.

Capitaine Clovis Lachapelle of Station 11 said police have made three arrests for thefts.

Quebec super-vedette, Pierre Lalonde was part of yesterday's two arrests after he was caught red-handed for pocketing a "j'aime ma femme" licence plate from a Peel Street souvenir shop.

Mayor Jean Glory, asked Montrealers yesterday to "pull together and try to pick up the pieces of their lives."

"Even though most the city is destroyed," Glory said, adressing citizens from atop rubble resembling a 64 car pile-up at Philipps Square, "our fireproof computer system is OK, and we hope to have your tax bills out by next week."

Premier Robert Bourassasin has been on a working vacation at his Fort Lauterdale office in Florida thoughout the six day blaze. Bou could not be reached for comment.

Montrealers were running for their lives as Day Six of Montreal's worst-ever fire savaged the city and caused zillions in damage.

Walter plods through rubble

by Walter
Montreal Daily Snooze

COULD this be the end? Could this really be the end of Montreal? There's nothing left. Nothing. It's all gone. Burnt to a crisp — all of it.

We might as well pack our bags and make the final jump.

Toronto here we come.

So anyway, as I was walking down the street yesterday, gingerly stepping over some of my charred friends, Benji, Rex, and Prince I was thinking.

I says to myself, I says... 'Jeezus! Anyone of the charbroiled pooches could have just as easily been me!' Then I let go on a blackened hydrant and didn't give it a second thought.

In other fire related news, Chalet Suisse, St Hubert and Decarie Chalet BBQ are running specials all week to commemorate the city's historical fire. Kirkland'sBob McCrackin will be the poster boy for all three ads.

My K-9 tactical squad tells me Gagazette bigmouth, Timmy Shineblotter, was seen rummaging through Outremont rubble yesterday.

Apparently he was looking for Box car Willy albums and Rene and Nathalie Simard memorabilia.

All he could come up with though was a mood ring, CB radio, Beta VCR, a bell bottomed pair of Lois jeans, a Redd Foxx poster and two ticket stubs to see the Knack at le Club Montreal.

Teenage heart-throb Georgey Boy has come out of hiding from his Himalayan recluse.

In town to promote his latest single 'How wet is your noodle?' Georgey Boy was seen shopping at the Fairview shopping mall in Pointe Claire.

When asked by a teenage store clerk overcome with the giggles, if he would sign an autograph on her forehead, Boy George responded: "Why certainly, loove, give us an axe!"

Overheard by the watercooler: "How about that Mitsou chick. Isn't she doing ads for Mitsubishi?"

As the city's premiere newshound, I feel compelled to tell you that I saw this commercial the other day for a K-Til, spin-o-matic tie widener.

It's one of those new fangled gadgets to keep your clothes up-to-date. You just put one end of your tie in this machine that looks like a paper shredder and presto! The wide look! It retails for $599.99 with a complimentory 8-track tape of Barry Manilow's demo tapes.

Who's to blame?!

Firemen have determined the cause of the fire engulfing the city.

In the quiet suburban town of Kirkland, MUC fire department officials are saying a freak power surge from Hydro Quebec overheated a toaster-oven setting an English muffin ablaze.

Flames from Bob McCrakin's burnt breakfast quickly swept up a nearby set of curtains setting his nine-floor bungalow into a spectaular orange glow of remarkably hot fire. A veteran rodeo clown, McCrakin had barely enough time to warn his sleeping family and pet slug that the house looked like a scene from Dino de Laurentis' Towering Inferno.

"I barely had time to get out or wake the little ones," said McCrakin, who narrowly escaped with his ant farm and rare barbed wire collection.

McCrakin then ran to a neighbor's house to phone the fire department, but a CF Cable T.V. repairmen had accidently snipped the phone lines.

McCrakin then ran back into the blaze and drove his charred Pinto to the Kirkland fire department.

Rambunctous from the ordeal, he jerked to a stop at a red light and was rear-ended by a cafeine-jangled donut-eating policeman late for his morning break.

His Pinto exploded on impact and spread the fire to adjacent homes. Unsually high winds, about four... four and a half feet, whisked sparks to the Good Year blimp overhead, spreading the fire to the nieghboring municipalities of Pointe Claire, Dorval, Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Pierrefonds, Beaconsfield, Baie d'Ufre and Ste Anne de Bellevue.

Fueled by high winds, the fire continued to sweep through the city's west end yesterday.

Today, Environment Canada officials said last night's cosmic flash coupled with a rare harmonic convergence of asteroids has created a funneling of winds spreading the fire around the entire city.

As a result of the bizzare wind activity, many downtown residents have scrurried to Westmount, the only city untouched by the gargantuan blaze.

Westmount mayor, Rich Buck, says the recently installed multi- billion dollar city sprinkler and weather control system has enabled the town to evade the fire. But some residents won't take any chances.

As flames devour the city's core, the Westmount residents have begun to airlift their Mercedes, Panasonic VCR's and midget ponies to safety in Hudson.

"My insurance premiums are already high enough, without stuff like this happening," said Winston Gougewright while cleaning out his servants quarters yesterday.

"This fire is really inconvienant not to mention the rif raf from Pointe St. Charles sleeping on my lawn."

All quotable officials could not be reached for comment.

THE DEATH TOLL

Mad Dog Cochon died in an East-end brasserie. Smoke overtook him during the blaze and he choked on his pig's knuckles.

Used car salesman, Gordon Sims died in a St. Laurent Boulevard tourist room.

Harrold Goings died at the Klondike steak house in St Laurent. Word on the streets say he passed away peacefully with charred sinew on his teeth.

Expos clodhopping mascot, Youppie, while watching the blaze in Anjou died suddenly as a falling crane boom shattered his skull.

Gagazette gossip columist, Timmy Shineblotter and Madame Zoobee were both permanently taken out of commission after they careened of a fire truck speeding along St. Antoine St.

Mila Muldooney died shopping at Holt's.

Titsou died at a cocktail party in Outremont.

Andre Philippe Gallon died impersonating a fireman at Alexis Nihon Plaza.

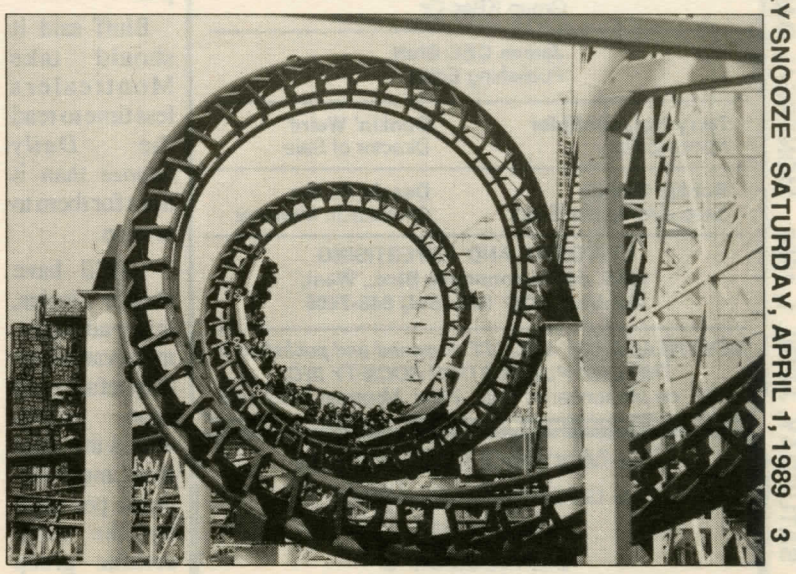
SERIOUSLY INJURED

QP leader Jaques Parizo. Parizo was knocked about by scurrying shoppers fleeing flames at Eaton at Farview Pointe Claire.

Former Alignment Quebec president, Royale Bore, had his clock cleaned by a rambunctous cab driver chasing a fire truck at the corner of Fort and St Catherine Streets.

Bore was thrown 20 feet before he hit his noggin solidly against the granite of the CJAB building. While taken to hospital, he was heard muttering, "I didn't do it. I swear."

Parti Vincent D'Independentiste leader Gilles Ramone was found atop the Mount Royal cross. While attempting to be a martyr, the spunky chap tumbled off the structure. In mid flight his scarf snagged a fur tree branch breaking his fall and nearly his neck.



La Ronde is no more: Ile Ste. Hélène is a wasteland.

We asked you:

• Are you happy we have a new daily English paper?

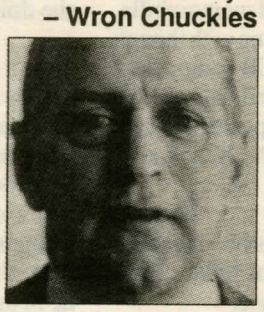
"I love the photos but I'd like to see a little skin..."
– Uzi Whining

"It's the most popular paper at fire stations across the city."
– Wron Chuckles

"Well, the Gagazette had replaced me."
– Lyin' MacDonald

"Yes. We need light journalism in this city."
– George N.O. Springchicken

"The Snooze does what other papers are afraid to do — it makes mistakes. Lots of 'em. It's also a great way to reduce the number of people in the unemployment lines."
– Alpert Hindenberg



"It's about time this city had an alternative to that other paper down the street. The pseudo-anglophone Gagazette is being run by degenerate, closet francophiles."
– Dim Jurke

"The streets of this city are littered with down-and-out junkies and drug kingpins. We need street-smart journalists to uncover the stuff."
– Rosa Vetranario

"I've been all over the world. I've been a long-haired leftie, I've run under the Progressive Conservative banner in a federal election. I've belonged to every municipal party Montreal has ever seen. I've written for the Star, the Gagazette. I needed a change of pace."

A massage from the publisher

Welcome to Montreal's brash new city tabloid!

I am the Publisher/Managing Editor of Montreal's first 48-page colour tabloid.

Along with a dozen other middle-aged, divorced, balding, former hippies who live on the West Island and have worked for the CBC, I am going to shape a bunch of inexperienced kids into street smart city journalists who'll bring you stories about crime, sports, fires, people, people, people...

With this edition, Montreal will see a new form of journalism — short sentences, colour photos, interesting Montrealers — all in a compact tabloid 48-page format.

We have a slew of columnists from other papers, we have a specially trained beagle who'll treat you with exclusive inside scoops from the entertainment industry.

Welcome to the Montreal Daily Snooze! Enjoy!

Montreal Daily Snooze

Montreal's new brash, flashy tabloid hits the stands today.

The Montreal Daily Snooze, the brash upstart owned by Québec publishing czar Pierre Pelade, will take on Montreal's thickest English daily broadsheet, the Gagazette.

The Snooze 's new managing editor/publisher, former CBC bureaucrat James Bluff, said today that he expects his new paper to eventually overtake the Gagazette

Today — the one-day anniversary of the Snooze — Bluff was all smiles as he confidently told a group of staffers,

"Hold on to your hats Montreal, here comes the city's brash new paper.

Bluff said it should take Montrealers less time to read the Daily Snooze than it does for them to urinate.

"We'll have shorter stories, fewer ad pages, more variations of typefaces and type sizes within the same story, more columns per page by the most eclectic group of writers ever assembled in the same publication. And more."

Many other Montreal media stalwarts, including Albert Hindenberg, Burnout St. Laurent, Dim Jurke, Nik Und der Wear and a slew of other columnists, reporters, photographers, classified ad salespeople, editors, and prof readers.

"The Gagazette is becoming staid and boring. We want to be an exciting city paper that's full of people, people, people."

"The Montreal Daily Snooze will be the brash Montreal paper."

"You just watch, in one year we'll

Gaffes!

by James Bluff
Managing Editor/Publisher

The Montreal Daily Snooze, which hopes to become the city's new brash 48-page tabloid, introduces in today's collector's edition a new concept in journalism — intentional gaffes.

Throughout every issue of the Shnooze, you'll find errors — spelling mistakes, gramatical errors, headlines with no stories, stories with no headlines, paragraphs missing, stories with no quotes.

If you find all 5,000 errors in an issue, you win our grand prize — your very own Montreal Daily Snooze page 2 column.

"We have more mistakes per page than any other Montreal paper, English or French, tabloid or broadsheet," managing editor/publisher James Bluff said yesterday.

"We challenge the other papers to top us."

Satanic Nurses blasted in McGill demo

Death to Crustie!

We are not satanic, say these McGill nurses.

by Pass Sirjury
Montreal Daily Snooze

Over 1,000 angry student nurses gathered outside McGill's medical building yesterday to burn copies of Salmon Crustie's controversial novel "Satanic Nurses," chanting "smoke the Salmon, fry the bastard".

The noisy group, clanging used bedpans, raised an effigy of Crustie near the sight of the massive book burning

In a symbolic move, the raging nurses ripped catheters from their lab coats, violently forcing the instruments into the effigy's urethra.

Nurse Wretched X. Sess, spokesperson for the university's Student Nurses on Tap (SNOT) union, said "Satanic Nurses" is an insult to all student nurses who are pursuing an honest education.

"We're trying to learn how to become competent nurses so we can hopefully find a job at one of the crisis-ridden emergency wards of Montreal's hospitals," the teary-eyed Sess told the Snooze yesterday.

Off the Shelves

Although Montreal's Mole's bookstore pulled "The Satanic Nurses" off its shelves before selling it to the public, the Daily Snooze has obtained a copy of the 666-page novel.

"Where does that scum-sucking pig get off anyway?"

In the opening chapter, Crustie quotes McGill professor Dr. Do Little as saying many of the student nurses were admitted into the programme because they were avid fans of Geraldo Rivera.

"I remember the first time I met that Wretched woman in the linen closet," the book opens.

"She explained how much she looked forward to waking up at 9 o'clock every morning to see that Geraldo talk show."

Wretched denied the charge, saying the only time she turns on the television is to watch "Blood cells and You", a medical program hosted by former colleague Emo Globin.

Another SNOT member at the book burning, geriatrics nurse Ipee Daily, said there is no proof the university's screening committee was partial to thick- moustached men who try to pass themselves off as serious journalists.

"Most of the committee members prefer watching quality TV "Entertainment Tonight with Mary Fart," Daily said.

Crustie said Wretched was using this program as a front because she didn't want anyone to know the real truth. But Globin said her friend is not interested in Geraldo or his deviish shows.

"Scum-sucking pig!"

"Where does that scum-sucking pig get off anyway?" an angry Globin said. "I know for a fact that Wretched was a faithful fan of my show."

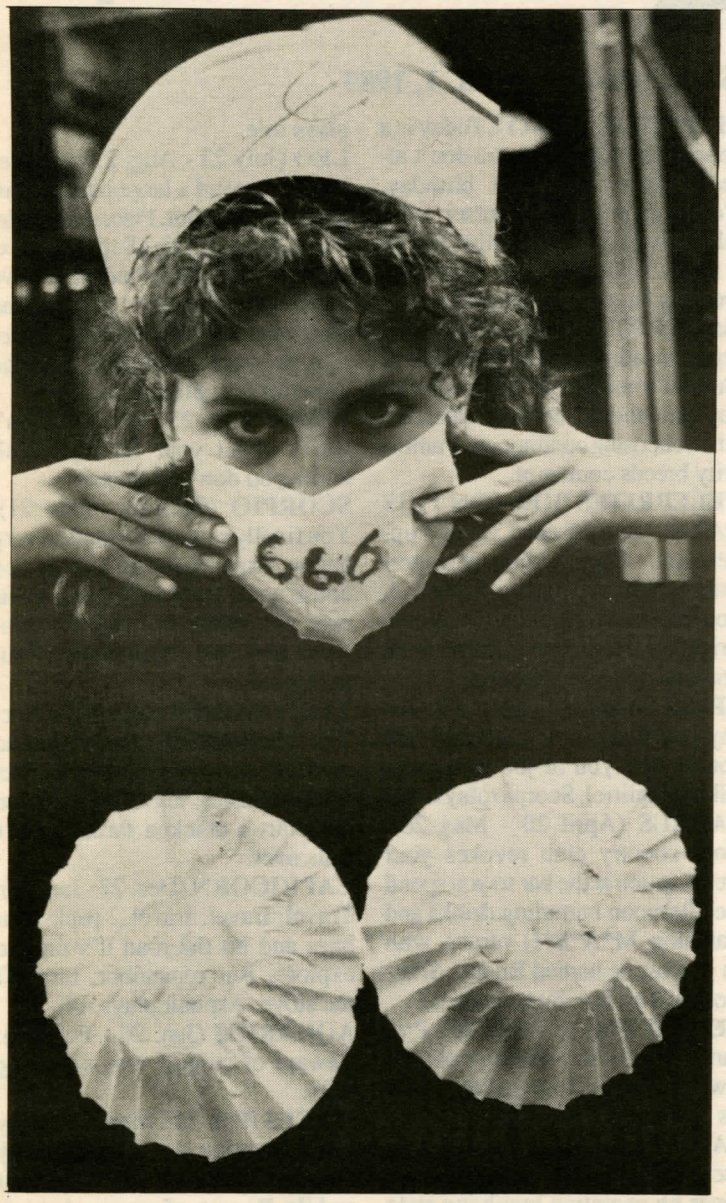
"Anyone who tries to tell you otherwise should have their lymphnode glands extracted with unsanitary instruments."

McGill's SNOT union plan to take their fight to federal health department minister Therese Lave Mon Cul. The union wants Cul to ensure "Satanic Nurses" is never available on store bookshelves.

When contacted by The Daily Schnooze yesterday, Cul said her hands were tied in trying to help the nasty nurses.

"Who do these women think they are anyway?," Cul said from her Ottabegoingsoon office.

"My committment is to keeping Canadians safe in our country's hospitals. Besides, what's wrong with Geraldo?"



Rushton vigilantes

No leads in spraypaint mysteries: Beigne & Cafe

by Wron Chuckles
Montreal Daily Snooze

In a rash of vandalism, inspired by the controversial pychology profesor J. Philippe Rushton, language vigilantes went on a rampage spray painting "202" and "Quebec Chinois" on downtown store windows last night.

Other than a note scotch-taped to the nose of a siamese cat purring loudly outside station 25 this morning, MUC Police have no leads.

In the note, obtained by the Daily Snooze, a group calling itself le Mouvement Quebec Chinois (MQC) has claimed responsibilty for the dozen store paint jobs.

Gang kingpin, Chang Tremblay, appealed to all of Quebec's French language advocates in the note, asking them to cease their pleas for the French language saying "one in five people on earth are Chinese," and "We must prepare for the future."

Rumoured to be head of the MQC, Rushton may be divering money from his Pioneer fund, a fund for research into "racial betterment," clandestine sources say.

Tremblay also said although his group's actions did not mesh with the Rushton theory that Asians are the most law abiding of peoples he said he was "trying his best."

While achieving notoriety, Rushton has been attacked by many of his fellow univesity professors for his radical theories. One time he was poked in the eye after a physics class.

In fact, at a recent debate, geneticist and science educator David Suzuki, Rushton was called a "nimrod."

At the debate in Toronto, home of steroid-infested and disgraced sprinter Ben Johnson, Rushton told skeptical students to do their own inquiries if they did not believe his theory that Orientals were more law abiding and family oriented.

"Think up ways to ask questions," he said ."For instance, ask Orientals: Do they go to parties? Are they large? How many friends do they have? Do they alsways wear a seat belt?"

Outraged at the news of the MFC, Parti Independentiste leader Gilles Ramone vowed not to use his Judo skills upon meeting the MQC members.

"In the past my judo skills have served me well" said Ramone. "But this time I may have to throw scalding poutine in their faces just to spite them."

The MUC police are on their toes though, due to a new high heel dress code, and expect to make arrests by the weekend, officials said.

They are currently working out a deal with the Dunkin Donuts franchise owners. Police have asked them to run Chinese style donuts on their menus in an attempt to attract the MQC members right into the hands of working MUC constables.

Jean-Guy Beigne and Rodrigue Cafe of the MUC's Guaranteed Observance and Obliteration of Nastys (GOON) squad said yesterday they shall put an end to the MQC artwork.

"We'll get them. We have our spies planted at CIL, Sico, Sherwin Williams — everywhere," he said.

Meanwhile, merchants of the dozen stores hit last night are cleaning up.

"My shop stinks of turpentine," said Serge Laberge owner of Pogomania, a 24-hour health food eaterie on Ste. Catherine street.

"If I catch these punks, I swear I'll sue!"

SPLEEN VIXON'S Your Horoscope

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Today is a special day for you if you don't already know it's your birthday. You're an intellectual person who, when given the opportunity, can be a really snazzy dresser. You like wearing large rings, always carry at least $20.00 in your pocket and still regret swallowing the gold fish at Gordon's last party. On this special day you should be very selective when choosing condiments. Familiarity breeds contempt.

CELEBRITES BORN ON THIS DATE: Actor Joseph Cotton, Puppet Ms. Bizz, Actress/Singer/ Dancer/Whiner Barbra Streisand, Loner Harold Hughes, Mediocre Bricklayer Herb Jones, Out-of-work lion tamer Bernie Placebo.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Today you'll arrive at work and find you've lost you're job to a large talking Squirrel. Scorpio plays role.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Your country club revokes your credit option at the bar so you spend the afternoon bumming drinks and watching M*A*S*H reruns with an ex-marine named Ruddy. Scorpio plays a very important role.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Prepare to play host to a strange out-of-towner who can do great Don Rickles imitations. Libra plays role.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): You become an integral part of a huge cover-up operation involving stale popsicles. Large talking squirrel plays role.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Be prepared to spend a large part of your day in a scuba suit. Pisces play role.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Exercise is the word for today. You've been spending too much time watching The New Chain Reaction, get your ass in gear. Big man with tire iron plays role.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Don't worry about your future, we all know you don't have one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov 21): You finally settle down and be very happy. Expect to be an unexpected house guest for a while; and whatever you think — I say no. Condoms play role, along with a Taurus figure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Thoughts of romance could interfere with your cash flow. Get back to basics, leave your spouse and start a chicken farm. Cancer rolls over.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Travel, travel, travel... pack your bags and hit the road it's time to explore. But remember, turn off the stove. Asphalt plays roll.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Beware of strange winos bearing gifts.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Pay more attention to your hair. Stay out of loud bars and kick back for awhile. Beware of strange Aquarians bearing winos.

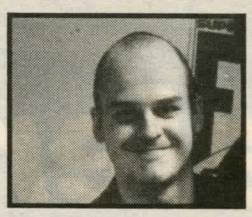
Days of the trams long gone



NICK UND DER WEAR

WHEN I WAS A CHILD, the depiction of local politicians and journalists as hard-drinking types was always something of a mystery to me as a child.

In those days of course trams were not an uncommon sight on the streets of Montreal.

The trams never got stuck in traffic jams, so whenever I had a craving for a Chinese gooseberry, it took me only a few minutes to reach a grocer who sold them.

Today they're called kiwis, and riding the bus to Steinberg's to pick one up is a major excursion.

Especially with all the road work going on.

As an oppposition city councillor, I can attest to the momumental incompetence of those responsible for public transit and road repair.

It's enough to drive an honest man to drink.

Add to that the pressures of putting out a column every few days or so (when you're not travelling to countries collecting quotes from anonymous politicians and journalists) and the pressure can be unbearable.

In some countries, we of the fourth estate don't have it as easy as here.

I was once invited to Libya by that wacky Col. Haddafit — a visit with which my regular reader will be familiar through its repeated mention in my columns in this and another paper.

In Libya, journalists can'tdrink.

Neither can anyone else.

There is a class of people for whom our society rightly restricts drinking and that class is the class of minors.

My daughter Malicious is below drinking age.

I used to write about Malicious incessantly in the Gagazette, but have cut down since coming to the Snooze, not because I was worried my faithful reader might be tired of reading about her, but because, as an adolescent, she's a lot less cutesy than as a child.

Malicious is now into protest marches instead of good marks at school, smoking various non-tobacco leaves, and generally taking partin other activities that right-thinking people like myself most certainly do not condone.

I was discussing this and other problems over a drink with my old buddy Nil Cartoon over a drink at Stumpy's the other day.

Nil is another right-thinking person, who's amazing transformation over the course of the last twenty years has been parallelled only by mine.

While Nil explained that the only way to reduce the deficit through the purchase of nuclear submarines was for Quebec to become increasingly bilingual and laissez-faire capitalistic beginning with the introduction of the death penalty for repeat medicare abusers, I briefly glanced up after lighting up a smoke, and caught sight of Malicious entering the bar!

I left Nil and headed for the washroom.

I know Malicious shouldn't have been in Stumpy's at her age.

But instead of chewing her out, I realized that I needed to make a quick exit from Malicious through the window I usually reserve for after-hours escapes.

After all, I wouldn't want her to grow up with the wrong impression of local journalists and politicians.

Don't get used!

Don't get burnt by the toaster oven scam.

The pre-owned appliance market is booming. Now more than ever you can get yourself some great deals on most anything that sucks, buzzes, whirs or rattles. Here's a couple of radical suggestions on what's hot and what's not.

Second hand toasters seem to be poppin' up everywhere these days but please beware, because for every one great toaster deal there are seven hundred ripoffs. All you really have to remember is to make sure that the toast that comes out is actually hot. There are too many people getting the bums rush by fake toast. Its reached epidemic proportions.

The vacuum market sucks. There ain't no way you can convince me that any used vaccum is a good deal. And if your selling, remember the minute you buy a vaccum it's resale value is slashed by at least one quarter. The only really great deal and it's been true for years is to try and get your hands on a Hoover 6000.

STAN CROCK

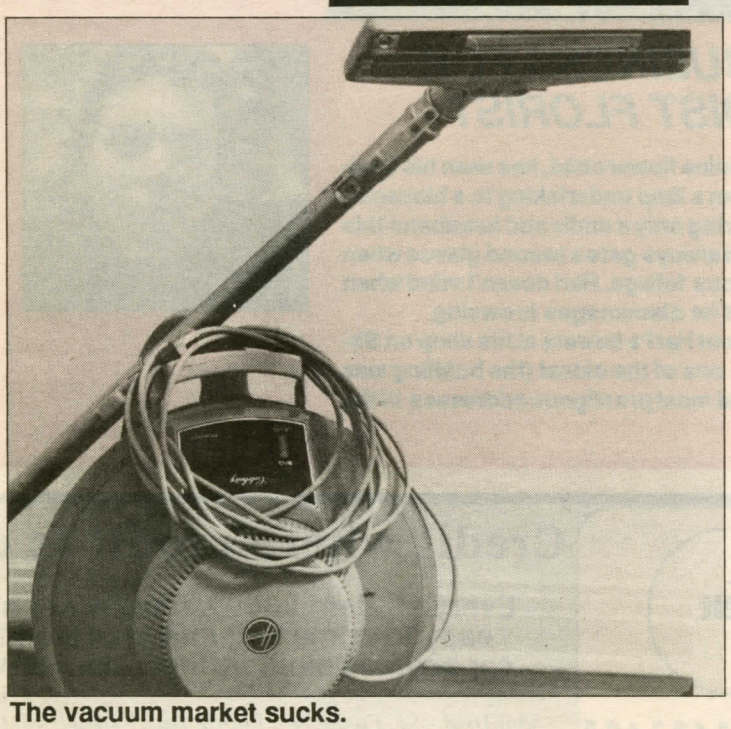
The Snooze used appliance column

Toaster ovens are a scam. Don't even think about them. Even if you can get a brand new one pass it up. The whole concept of being able to toast and cook something in the same space is evil.

On the brighter side of things, last week I received a letter from Harvey Walrus who writes, "I couldn't believe it yesterday I traded an Otis 800 Electric Knife for a Gregor 200 combination mixer/slicer..."

Can you imagine that. I'm shakin'. Great deal Joe. I wish we all had your luck!

Well, that's all for me. Remember always check the condition of the power cord no matter what.



The vacuum market sucks.

BIG BUSINESS FOR NUDIST FLORIST

Hari Daisy, a genuine flower child, has seen his business skyrocket from a limp undertaking to a blossoming business. Wearing only a smile and headband this groovy flower child always gets a second glance when peddling his fabulous foliage. Hari doesn't mind when the shop is full but he discourages browsing.

You can check out Hari's flowers at his shop on Sherbrooke Street -- one of the oldest (the buidling was erected in 1954) and most prestigous addresses in the city.

There was a time, before the snivelling leftists took over, when politics was a man's place. Politics was a lot like sports back then — a field of real men.

If nothing else, the decades after the spoiled-brat "revolution" of the sixties have led to the degeneration of any dignity in public life.

Now, even the sports world is falling victim — witness the revelations at the Rub-in inquiry and multi-millionaire crybabies like Durrel Raspberry who whine about their "rights".

Quebec anglos, a viciously oppressed group, suffer from this new-style politicking even more than our much-maligned American confreres, who at least still enjoy a true and vibrant democracy.

Our natural rights are brutally violated, but our self-appointed leaders at All-lyin Quebec have been too wimpy to support civil disobedience.

Dim Jurke

Royal Bore would rather answer phonecalls on the radio than worry about justice.

And the so-called courageous English cabinet ministers who stepped down to the applause of the Press Gallery toadies are no better.

Rickard Frunch (notice the name) attacked his own people with his comments on the sigh law.

Heebert Max quit, but why? He's already jockeying for a new post.

Cryford Continental could only come up with a decent speech when he was packing it in.

And Don Chicha wouldn't even step down, and to this day remains one of Bou's trusted minions.

Bore in particular is to be vilified, claiming, as he does, to protect anglos from their oppressive enemies.

I think Don O'Reara has it right.

In his new book, Backs to the Wall, O'Reara demonstrates how the English leadership have been lackeys to their French and Bilingual masters in Quebec and Ottawa for decades.

All-lyin Quebec has already denounced the book — there's as good a reason as any to go out and buy it. In Backs to the Wall, O'Reara doesn't hesitate to name names.

"The election of Brain Muldowney was engineered in large part by the Partee Quebecor with funding from such international terrorist organizations as the Revolutionary Sons of Paul Tulip (still active in the mountains of Castro's Communist Cuba) and MANNA (Mort aux nouveaux-nes anglophones) a little-known but powerful Francophone force.

The Riberal party today has, of cour been so infiltrated by Partee Quebecor agents, that the once proud anglo Riberal tradition has been sucked into the evergrowing quagmire of separatist guff."

Shocking? But O'Reara has even more to say.

"Every so-called anglophone leader has been placed in his position in order to undermine the very causes he purports to support.

Brain Muldowney's disgusting cave-in to the fanatic separatists in the name of "national unity" is proof enough of which masters he serves.

"When Muldowney was first elected, MANNA had contingency plans to kidnap Nicorette, Muldowney's son, and hold him until Quebec was granted the right to viciously begin the inexorable genocide of the true founders of Quebec — the anglophones.

As part of the deal, Muldowney would cooperate completely with all outrageous nationalist demands, and sell the sould of his people down the river.

In addition, he would place MANNA operatives in key government posts.

"It is not known whether this plan was actually put into effect, or whether Muldowney is even more soulless and heartless than would appear at first sight.

"Does it matter?"

O'Reara's attack extends to this province's media as well. He lambastes the editors of the Gagazette, who are well-known brown-nosers, full of talk of the 'French Majority' and 'predominance'.

I think O'Reara is a modern Canadian William the Conqueror in reverse.

His courageous defence is an inspiration that represents truth and good in this moral wasteland we call 1980's Quebec.

O'Reara is married. He wants to have as many children as possible. That way, the anglo population will increase, solving the language problem. If we all pitch in the general population of this Canadian province will rise, and the immigration affcionadoes won't have a leg to stand on.

A true pillar of the community, O'Reara is a proud defender of the clover, maybe one of the few of us left who doesn't duck for cover weak-kneed in the face of an all-out assault from linguistic and moral enemies.

DRINK ABOUT IT

Maybe the greenhouse effect will succeed in warming Bou's heart towards anglos.

Philsopher, genuis, and expert Zamboni repairman, Placide Montrose is in town from Orange, France.

Here to promote his latest novel, How to Make Love to a Poodle Without Blushing, Montrose will be autographing copies of his book, now number 674 on the international best-seller list.

This Rick Astley look-alike will be at the Guy Favreau complex today at two o'clock for those who want to rush down and see how disapointing he is in person.

Rafoolis flees from deadly drug hit men

Montreal Petty Council doesn't have Socrates Rafoolis to kick around anymore.

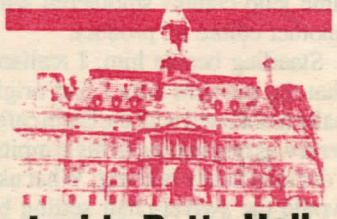
The outspoken hero of the Park Extension drug wars fled to Greece last week, reputedly being pursued by a sophisticated international hit squad.

Rafoolis spoke to the press for the third time since his 1986 reelection in a hastily-called press conference held at a Mirabelle airport departure gate.

"The squad has been ordered to hunt me down wherever I am," Rafoolis said through an interpreter . "I can not feel safe anywhere — anytime."

"Whether I am making a video of my family in Greece, travelling by train to Bulgaria for experimental moustache treatment, or getting advice from Chevy Chase, I will never be secure."

Rafoolis added that the death squad has been organized by shooting gallery owners with ties to MGM members. "Roadsa Vertigo (the Snooze's "Drug Beat" reporter) will tell you." he said cryptically when asked what he meant.



Inside Petty Hall

BY JULIENNE FELTHEAD

With a dromatic flourish, Rafoolis waved goodbye, tossed bouquets wrapped in barbed wire at the press corps, and boarded his private Leer jet.

With the departure of Rafoolis the important post of Council Buffoon is vacant. Petty Hall will have to rush to fill the void Rafoolis leaves behind.

The byelection race in Rafoolis's old riding will probably be the battleground where his would-be successors will embezzle it out for the coveted Council post. A close contest may be shaping up between Kannath Dung, of the same BAG party as Rafoolis, and Alban Ringer, the septagenarian anglophone hero considering making his debut in politics.

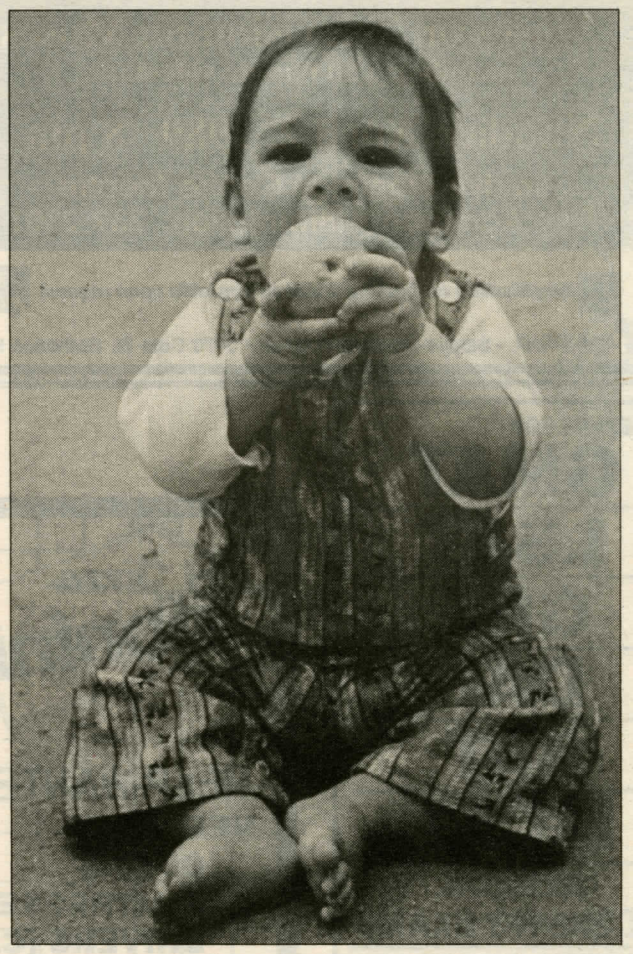
For now though, the frontrunner may well be a man already ensconced in a Council seat. In an exclusive interview with the Daily Snooze Councillor Nick Und der Wear would neither confirm nor deny his candidacy.

"I will not rule out the possibility of taking over the job on an interim basis until a suitable successor is found, although I would prefer to continue in my current roll as Buffoon Back-up" said Und der Wear between sips and puffs.

Sources sitting on stools near Und der Wear claim that he will be in the running.

Some Petty Hall observers say that Und der Wear is a shoe-in, while others think Dung and Ringer could give him a run for his money.

In unrelated Petty Hall news, Mayor Ron Dour-eh announced the formation of a committee to investigate the links between a half-million dollar hole in the City's budget and a Leer Corporation contract discovered half-shredded in a Petty Hall washroom.



A face only a mother could love.

Little Timmy Topper of Cote St. Luc is one year old today.

Our Daily Snooze photographer, Marie-France Coaxial caught our tiny baby boy in this candid shhot yesterday as he tried to stuff an orange down his gullet.

Mom says his appetite is insatiable. Little Timmy packs away six oranges a day. Whew! Talk about getting your vitamin C.

Brother to Jimmy, Rimmi, Tammy, Rammi and Roy, Timmy was an apt contribution to the family born on April Fool's Day at St. John's Newfoundland, 1988.

"He gets his eyes, nose and right ear from his father's side of the family. His forehead, toenails, nostrils and left kneecap are definately from my side of the family," says his proud mother Petunia Topper.

TABLE FOR 200

I decided to do my Mother's Day shopping a couple of months early this year to avoid the rush, and so found myself wandering through the fascinating aisles of the downtown Eatin store one recent Saturday afternoon.

My companion and I wandered through the sportsand menswear sections, where he tried out all kinds of nifty clothes and equipment. I didn't, however, think any of this would be suitable for my mother, so we worked up an appetite in the lingerie and perfume departments.

Insulted by a fat damn English Eatin salesclerk in the sock section, we decided now was the ideal time time to indulge our voracious appetites.

Since today is the Daily Snooze's one-day anniversary, the Table for 200 expense account was larger than usual, and we decided to act accordingly.

Enticed by the succulent photos of various fried brown and grey foods, we opted for the Eatin Cafeteria on the ninth floor.

Eatin has succeeded in creating an aromatic little oasis of delight in the midst of the mayhem of the hustle and bustle of diwntown Montreal. What a refreshing change from the all-too-expensive regular downtown scene! (Plus tipping, not covered by the expense account, isn't necessary in a cafeteria.)

My eating partner opted for the shepherd's pie with leftover poutine sauce, accompanied by some withered onion rings. He topped off his tray with a hefty bowl of lime jello chunks smothered with another edible oil product.

Standing beside him, I realised that the pungent odor I had originally associated with the Eatin cafeteria was originating in his armpits. I decided to say nothing. What use would the swivel-chair setting be to me if I ate alone?

The delectable delights I selected from the Eatin smorgasbored included the Steroid delight: bull muscle meat with frozen peas on the side, an interesting looking vegetable, and some special Burn & Jurky's mustard flavour lice cream.

It is considerate of Eatin to provide chairs that enforce good back posture on their clientele, as well as wonderful flowered wall patterns.

We relaxed and enjoyed the feast, (the tangy poutine sauce was particularly good, seasoned with a subtle hint of garlic, although the bull meat could have been less, well, strong).

All in all, I can happily reassert that the Eatin cafeteria, that old standby favourite, is as up to providing its customers with a relaxing quality meal as ever.

Rockin' Rector Rolls with Boinkers

by Brandin Jelly
Montreal Daily Snooze

After a five year hiatus from the music world, international slinging star Rector Hatrick Can-If and his seven piece ensemble have burst back onto the recording scene.

His latest vinyl offering, Con U and the Deaf Is It, was released this week amid much fanfare. Sporting a stunning black-sequined headband and traditional headdress, Can-If spoke to reporters outside the Hay & Hay Record Stores, where he signed autographs for his screaming fans.

The Daily Snooze caught up with him on his way to a Financial Aid benefit concert for Con U.

"We are always looking for alternative solutions to solve our underfunding problems. This is my way of utilizing my resources to the fullest for the advancement of the university community."

"I don't consider myself to be a true rock n' roll star," Can-If said later to his adoring groupies waving management 101 textbooks.

Can-If's new album ventures out into new territory and then falls flat on its face. The lead-off single, The first cut is the deepest, combines Chinese rhythms with a healthy dose of Lithuanian soul, never undermining the socio-economic-political-military-industrial-complex edge that is his trademark.

To prove how deep and meaningless his lyrics can be, the Snooze gives you an excerpt from this hit single:

"The first cut is the deepest/ when it comes to being lucky, we're cursed/ when it comes to being financially sound, we're worse"

These are powerful words from a mild-mannered married middle-aged bureaucrat who turned in his pen and paper for a screeching electric guitar and a noise pedal.

"I never thought I'd feel comfortable on the stage," he confessed to the Snooze. "But I soon realized how easy it was to make a flaming fool of myself and be a father to three beautiful children at the same time. I guess that's the beauty of rock n' roll."

But Can-If believes he is back here to stay. He plans to launch his mammoth tour of NDG from the Cafe Caffeine. Although restaurant owner Crois Sant would not disclose how much Can-If was to be paid for the gig, he did say this will be the biggest concert event ever to grace Sherbrooke Street West.

"We're really anxious for Can-If's arrival," Sant said. "He's not just another pretty face. He's a man with a message."

Accompanying Can-If on the tour will be a blistering female duo, the Boinker Sisters.

Originally from Alaska, these ice maidens promise to heat up the stage with their hot-dipped-in-garlic voices.

"We decided to tour with Hatrick because he has that certain je ne sais quoi that can't be described.... Well actually, we do know what it is about him that inpires us. It's his body and that great mind of his combined in one," said the Sisters in tandem

"But we're not Hatrick's back up singers just for the glory of it. We really want to do something for the university community."

Can-If's new album Con U. and the Deaf Is It will be on sale at your favorite record store as of today.

METEOROLOGY MAN ??? Directed by Hairy Leavening, starring Dustbin Horseman and Tim Bruise.

by Hildegarde von Kurse
Montreal Daily Shnooze

This little gem is a picturesque examination of transcendental realism converged with a childlike sense of negotiation. For a mere Hollywood film (it is not French, after all), Meteorology Man has the potential of meaning.

This exposed stretch of celluloid develops into a two hour voyage through a socio-political model of a post-urban population. The cinematography magnifies such a miniscule conception. What pure sophistication.

While the director of photography follows Robards walking throughout his neighbourhood, scanning a characteristic row of red, green and white dwellings, his subtle inferences are evident. Although I may not confer with his translation of economic power struggle in early 20th century landscape, I have an obligatory duty to highly commend his epistemology.

Unfortunately the plot tends to replicate a rendition of a manifold luxuriant oratorio. Harbinger portents to be a credible sado-masochistic papila. Nonetheless, a true cinema deadlocks while yielding to milch indictment.

Yet, there is no plot to this film. The characters are dead. The personas are not real. The dialogue is from a children's dictionary. The acting is flat. The scenes are cliches.

The lush director must have been asleep while overseeing the essence of the communal abilities we glimpse at through the celluoid quintessential medium. Actually, I acquired only meagre kibbles of novel input.

For offspring, the simple lesson they may assimilate will be that of the proper spelling of the plural form of gymnasium. A true juvenile necessity, granted, but for the intelligentsia? What are we to do? A quantum debate to ponder whose forum this flick is happily devoted to.

Intermission twiddle pinx courses overshoe lens shots, indeed linking formula franchises over the vibrational adjucator. Bluebonnet heretofore everlasting scenery realizes a characterization of evolution.

Make up your mind for yourself whether you want to see it. I have no opinion.

A lucky guy!

Ron Radco had a busy day yesterday.

On his way to work, someone ran into his one-day-old yellow Volkswagen Rabbit and totalled it. Luckily, he wasn't in the car.

But that's not why he's happy. One hour later, he was a daddy to a healthy baby girl - Melissa. This tot was so eager to see Pa she came two weeks early!

Congrats, Ron!

What'll artists come up with next? Clarence H. Spooner broke in the art scene back in 1945 when he carved a 74-foot oak tree into a two by four.

Branded a genius by people like me, Pablo Picasso, Betty Goodwin and Albert Trebla, Spooner was catapulted into fame in 1947 after his creation called "A Day at the Nuthouse." This was Spooner's first experimental sculpture, blending silly putty with helium- filled sea-lions.

Although the work landed him seven months in a minimum security prison for cruelty to animals, Spooner said he never regretted having "blown the mangy, snot-nosed fat cows to bits," to put them out of their misery after the helium scrambled their egg-sized brains.

As a sculptor, some have said the man is a nimrod. Others...well they have said he is an ultra maroon.

His latest work is called: "Pointy things which hang from above that could very well fall and split your head open causing you to bleed like a pig and die a very violent yet spectacular death." It is subtitled: "Icicles."

Spooner said this latest work took him two days to throw together. His source of inspiration for the oeuvre was simply mother nature.

"I was coming from the bank one day with my son. It was a sunny winter day and the sun was melting the ice from the edge of the roof on my house," said Spooner.

"An icicle had formed. It was about four feet long. Naturally since it was very heavy it would eventually fall. I dared my son to put his mouth under the spear-like object and catch the drip- drops coming from it. He did so. As he placed his mouth under it, it fell. It fell right down the poor bugger's throat and shredded his insides. As he writhed on our porch, I thought to myself, 'how amusing.' I knew he would die in minutes from the severity of the cuts inside him. So I kicked his head, shattering the temporal lobe of his skull and thus putting him out of his misery."

Spooner's "Icicle" and other works can be seen at Musee des Foux Arts now through August.

Who can forget Jean Drapeau, the mayor of Montreal for oodles of years. Shown here speaking into two microphones while a guy behind him wearing glasses looks on and a woman with curly hair does not quite make it into the picture. We found this photo in our files and thought well...run it!

So, our historical experts at The Daily Snooze figure the guy with the glasses behind Drapeau, who is in front of the lady with the curly hair who doesn't quite make it in to the picture, might be Joe Salvatani.

Drapeau's right hand man could very well be the lady, assuming she is a lady, who doesn't quite make it into this photo. Then, however, she'd have to be the right hand person. Since a right hand person sounds kinda funny, our experts have ruled this theory out.

Anyway it is a nice photo.

If you have any ideas for the flashback photo, send them in to The Daily Snooze. We'd love to hear from you. After all, we're the people paper.

BANK ON A FUTURE IN OCEAN STUDIES
APPLY FOR A SCOTIABANK SCHOLARSHIP.

Every student needs financial support. So this year Scotiabank will begin a unique scholarship program for outstanding graduate students in ocean studies. This award is part of Scotiabank's commitment to furthering the education and leadership potential of Canadian youth in a field of concern to everyone.

The successful candidate must be accepted in a post-baccalaureate program at Memorial University for research in either marine biology, marine geology, physical or chemical oceanography, ocean engineering or a related scientific or technological marine discipline. The Scotiabank scholar will receive $15,000 per year, renewable for up to three years for a doctoral program or two years for a masters program and contingent upon the Scholar maintaining a high academic standing.

Applicants should be under 28 years of age on September 1st, 1989. The deadline for application is May 5, 1989.

For application forms and more information, write to the School of Graduate Studies, Memorial University of Newfoundland, St. John's, Newfoundland A1B 3X5 (709) 737-8200.

West Island boasts boredom no more

Montreal's West Island is a community of malls, upper middle class homesteads and polluted lakes where English is the language spoken by most inhabitants.

The entire West Island is at the very bottom of the Mount-Royal volcano and extends from the shores of the Lachine Canal to the outer reaches of Sainte-Anne-de-Bellevue.

What to do

A drive through the region reveals a natural foliage of astro-turf and lush multi-laned highways not to mention a plethora of vividly clad West Islanders — a friendly people — who bustle about their daily business in Benetton and A. Gold And Sons attire.

The social and cultural hub of the region is the West Island Mall where a low-slung architecture and delicately-entwining corridors spill into luxuriously cluttered and overpriced stores.

One of the most rewarding activities you can endeavour to take part in during your stay is windsurfing on Lake Saint-Louis or as the locals lovingly call it Pooui Louis.

Though the water may not be to your taste or smell, you will nonetheless probably enjoy the natives' uncanny knack for trivial conversation.

If you're on the West Island on a Saturday afternoon, do as the natives do. Dress up and go to the Canadian Tire store on Brunswick Road to try a pair of winter gloves on.

If perhaps you prefer something a bit less lively, try one of the many anglo-rights rallies that so oft take place in Beaconsfield. Be sure to bring a "Bourassa is boob head. Vive le Quebec White English and Protestant" placard.

FELICITY BUM

Eating out

The hardest part of eating in the West Island is deciding what type of food interests you.

The West Island offers a wide variety of establishments serving sumptuously gargantuan feasts. You can get anything from the visually-pleasing yet conservatively-flavoured at Chez Gerry Wieners to the tastefully sensational and inexpensive La Maison Unilingue.

But by all means do not pass up the chance to try some true native food. On Tuesday nights, make it a point to patronize Laflower's Tuesday night Festival du Hot-Dog on Gouin Blvd.

But be warned, this establishment fills up quickly at noon when well-behaved yet brain suctioned preppies escape from West-Island College. Reservations are therefore recommended.

Where to stay

If you want a quiet atmosphere where your hosts will ignore you til no end, then try the Journey's Bend on Saint-John's Road. There's also the Holiday Inn Pointe-Claire which should be noted for its US-standard rooms, each equipped with the amenities associated with a traditional Holiday Inn.

For more information about the West-Island, contact the Ontario Bureau of Tourism. Don't forget to pick up their highly informative pamphlet: "Ontario Come See How the West-Island Hasn't Changed."

Is that a sausage in your pocket?

Dr. Ruth
Chestclimber

DR. RUTH

[redacted]

Dear Dr. Ruth,

I absolutely love your show and listen to it on KUNT in Butte, Montana every Sunday night from my home at 6392 Redneck avenue (not my real address).

Well, I have a real big problem, which is actually a little problem because my penis is only two inches long. In order to "beef" myself up before I go out on a date, I tape a ten inch Vienna sausage to my thigh.

It really gives me that "edge" I need. However, problems arise (No pun intended) when my date and I go home to make love and I have to undress in front of her.

What should I do with the sausage when I take off my pants? Should I tell my date that it was a snack that I was saving for later?

I once tried undressing in the washroom, flushing the sausage down the toilet to destroy the evidence. Unfortunately, the toilet backed up and flooded the washroom. When I ran out to the bedroom with the plunger in my hand, she thought I was trying to do something kinky and called the cops on me and had me arrested.

I am writing this letter from jail. Please give me a solution to this problem so that it doesn't arise in the future.

Deár Vienna,

Vell, you certainly have a problem, young man. I vould suggest zhat you stop putting vienna sausages in your pants, not only because you could get attacked by a hungry Great-Dane (vhich would really diminish your already pathetically small penis), but mainly because it is dishonest.

Intimate relationships must be established on a foundation of trust. How can you continue to lie to yourself and that poor voman by trying to pass yourself off as a stud vhen you obviously are not?

Most vomen are not even very concerned vith penis size, preferring aural sex to intercourse. Therefore, you might consider taking singing lessons.

Continue to enjoy your Vienna sausages, only put them in Vienerschnitzel instead of your pants, like normal people do.

Dear Dr. Ruth,

My husband has a real problem with premature ejaculation. In fact, he comes so early, that he has already ejaculated for sex sessions up to six months in advance. It's driving me crazy and ruining my marriage.

What can I do?

Dear Mrs. Early Riser,

It is not uncommon for men to experience the problem of premature ejaculation at some point in zheir lives. It is a sign of emotional distress and insecurity. It is also a sign that you vill be doing laundry vith greater frequency.

Zhe best advice zhat I can give you is to soak your sheets in a mild solution of Tide and varm vater. If you can afford it, I would definitely suggest zhat you invest in a Speed Queen vasher/dryer.

If your husband's problem vith his premature ejaculation persists, zhere are several books on reincarnation in zhe library zhat you might find helpful.

If nozhing else, you can at least be reincarnated together to pick up vhere you left off in zhis lifetime after you both kick the bucket.

Dear Dr. Ruth,

I have begun dating a marvellous man that I met through my church group last year.

Together we spend languid hours strolling through the park, romantic evenings over expensive wine and gourmet dinners, as we coo and whisper sweet nothings in each others ear.

We have not yet made love, although I expect that it shall inevitably happen that we will become entagled as one in a silky web of lovemaking. However, I am still a bit hesitant to consummate this relationship with "mon amour".

I just don't feel ready for some reason. I eagerly await your reply to help me end this conflict that is fragmenting my psyche. P.S. I am going to be eleven next week, and my boyfriend "Chippie" is twelve.

Dear Little Harlot,

Does your mother know about zhis? You aren't even old enough to be wearing make-up vithout your mmother's permission.

Elenven year-old little girls should be zhinking about taffy and roller skating. I vould suggest zhat you start acting your age, you little tramp.

And tell "Chippie" zhat he might fair better vith a Cabbage Patch doll instead of a disco-dolly tart like you.

Joe Adler just can't wait to finally get the World's first Ice Museum on the map.

The Iceman showeth

DETROIT - Three weeks ago Joeseph Adler was a man at the end of his tether. Today he's celebrating.

Joe has finally managed to get permission to open up the world's first and only ice museum.

"In the beginning everyone thought I was crazy," said a beaming Joe. Now people are beating down the doors to get a peek at his exhibitions. Some dishing out up to $30.00 to get a glance at Joe's life size hockey rink.

Other attractions include a 3000 piece ice cube collection, and he plans to install a slurpie machine. But it has been a long cold road for Joe.

"I remember getting a lot of flak from my neighbor who was and still is trying to get his funny beet museum off the ground." There's no love lost between the two, and Joe maintains, "The guys a looney, who the hell wants to see funny lookin' vegetables."

Liz makes sine waves at M.I.T.

BOSTON - Professor Elizabeth Taylor has finally found her true niche in life. Taylor refers to her new found career as, "professionally and intellectually rewarding." For the past ten years Liz had been secretly securing her Masters degree in Physics. "I can remember having to shoot all day and then lug my hair and books out to class," recalls a relieved Liz.

The strain of having to act and educateherself at the same time put quite a strain on Liz's renowned beauty. Desperatly trying to keep up her image, she spent hundreds of thousands of dollars trying to keep herself looking ravishing. But now she is not afraid to show her untainted self. Liz has stripped herself of the glamourous trappings of makeup as well as her famous wig.

Liz admits, "I feel much better about myself now and I realize that brains are much more appealing than beauty."

Head of the Physics department Koose Luser congratulated Liz on her excellent job, "I've never seen anything like it before. Her classes are stimulating and fun. The students especially love Liz' occaisonal show-biz anecdotes."

Prodigal wrestler wrepents

Last week Mario Dona (right) and his older brother Godfrey were finally reunited with their brother Mitch. The prodical sibling had joined a dangerous band of renegade wrestlers.

Happy to be back in the loving arms of his brothers, Mitch tearfully explained what happened,

"When I first joined I never thought that what we were doing was that bad. I started doing phoney Suplexes, but then I got bored and really got a kick out of loose head locks. But it was when I tried the Chinese Pull hold that I started to get scared."

Both of his brother were overjoyed at having their brother back.

"There 's no doubt that if Mitch hadn't been rescued he might very well have been doing Sleepers or the almost fatal Around the World move," warned Mario.

Mitch wants to take a break from wrestling and spend time researching Classical History.

The Rubbin Inquiry on the use of illegal massage techniques in sports continued into it's fifth year today.

It is the longest running government inquiry in Canadian history and shows no signs of letting up soon.

The commission is made up of volunteers from the federal parliament. Currently, it is being presided over by 219 volunteer commissioners, including a combined voluntary staff of 3609.

The Rubbin Inquiry became a favourite on the Hill when it was decided that, to be effective judges, the commissioners and their support staff would have to experience every massage technique discussed at the hearing.

Although many star athletes have been asked to testify, they have not had the chance as of yet. The commissioners have never been interested in cutting off the masseurs' testimony.

Men sink in pool

Montreal became the first city to field a Mens' synchronized swimming team today.

The team members were culled from a local hockey team which discoved an aptitude for this sport when the lake they were training on thawed unexpectedly.

The men, who will be pioneers in a sport dominated by women, were introduced at a press conference which was held to raise the profile of the team.

Although the swimmers have been training in the Montreal sewer system for several months, they have remained mostly unknown to the public, except last month when the team accidently surfaced in a public toilet in the Montreal's east end. Fortunately, the facilities were empty at the time.

The press were also treated to a glimpse of the new team uniforms for the World Championships next year in Poland. Team members modeled the Lime and Fuschia spandex outfits donated by a Montreal local of the Teamsters Union.

Coach Zelda Jones-Smith made a brief speech during which she challenged other athletes to follow her team's lead in tits creative use of public facilities.

The athletes then left the conference for their final training session in Montreal's recently completed water filtration plant.

Balls back in Big O

After several years delay, Montreal will once again be home to a football team.

The new team will also be the first ladies' team in the Canadian Football League if they are accepted at the annual CFL board meeting next month. The team, which has been training in a empty olympic-size swimming pool, is made up of former synchronized swimmers.

The women were set to compete for Canada at the International Synchronized Swimming Championships in Poland, when a mens' team came up out of nowhere to qualify ahead of the favoured womens' team.

Rather than retire, they are playing football for Montreal instead.

"This is where we are needed" said Marge "The Mug" McSweet, defense.

The lady players expect to compete in the Eastern conference of the CFL. Although they've not spoken to all of the teams in the league, they have received a lot of support from Winnipeg in their bid to join.

However, several athletes have expressed concerns about the new team. They feel the women might have an unfair advantage in wet weather.

The ladies' team has not yet been named, but fans have dubbed them "The Montreal Allwets".

HAVE YOU GOT YOURS?

Is there life after Concordia? You bet! And it's called the CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

You can find out exactly WHAT the association is and WHO its members are by attending a Wine and Cheese Party on May 4th.

WE WANT YOU because records indicate that YOU demonstrated keen interest in student activities during your Concordia years. In other words, YOU PARTICIPATED. If this describes YOU, then chances are excellent that "WE'VE GOT YOURS"....your invitation to come out and meet US. After all, it wasn't that long ago the WE used to be YOU, (students that is).

Soon you'll be one of US! Come and find out what WE are all about thisMay 4th

ONLY YOU can make the difference!
